ZONE 2 — KESERWAN & JBEIL

Jounieh | Harissa | Faraya | Byblos | Aqoura

Where to eat, what to do — the short guide

02

The zone at a glance

A 40-minute drive takes you from a Phoenician harbour to a 2,465 m ski summit, past Lebanon's most visited shrine and its most famous cave. Five working areas, each with its own scope rule; every venue carries an exact locality, so Kaslik, Zouk Mosbeh, Amchit, Faqra and Mzaar keep their own names.

HOW TO READ THIS

The pages that follow are the top picks only — the ones with a public rating or a reason to single them out. Ratings are out of 5, review counts in brackets; a dash means no public score, not a bad one. All 258 venues and 58 places, with sources, map links and confidence levels, are in the companion workbook.

WHY AQOURA LOOKS EMPTY

Jounieh holds about two in five food records; Aqoura has seven venues in total. That gap is real — Aqoura is a village at 1,600 m whose draw is landscape, not dining. Eat on the coast, spend daylight in the mountains.

Three ways to spend a day

The classic coast day

Jounieh → Harissa → Byblos

Morning on the bay, teleferique up to Our Lady of Lebanon before noon (the haze thickens later), lunch on the plateau, then 25 minutes north to Byblos for the castle, the souk and a seafood table at the old port.

When: All year. The cable car stops in high wind.

Snow and stone

Faraya → Faqra → Mzaar

Up the Kfardebian road early. Ski Mzaar (1,830–2,465 m, 18 lifts) in winter, or in summer walk the Faqra Roman temple and the natural bridge at Jisr el Hajar. Chalet lunch, Chabrouh dam on the way down.

When: Ski roughly December–March; ruins easiest May–October.

The Adonis run

Byblos → Nahr Ibrahim → Afqa → Aqoura

From the Byblos port inland up the Adonis valley. Afqa waterfall pours from the cave ancient writers called the source of the myth; above it, Aqoura's lakes at ~1,600 m among rock-cut chapels and cliff tombs. Eat before you climb.

When: April–October. Falls strongest in spring snowmelt.

Method and sources

258 food and drink venues and 58 activities across 40 exact localities, checked 2026-09-10. Confidence is recorded per record in the workbook: High = published review score or established venue; Medium = current directory listing, unverified experience; Low = thin listing, call first. Directory data lags reality in Lebanon — seasonal venues and village kitchens especially — so confirm by phone before a long drive.
